I promise you'll never want to order delivery again after you see how easy it is to make pizza at home using fresh ingredients. This recipe includes instructions for how to create a chewy crust that's lightly crisp on the bottom using all-purpose flour or bread flour. It makes a dough that is far better (and cheaper!) than any store bought dough or restaurant pizza I have tried. Even the tomato sauce is made from scratch! It's wonderfully simple and flavorful, and is the perfect base for layering on lots of cheese and your choice of toppings.

Precaution

The screenshot shows a web browser at `localhost:8080/Foodic/all_recipe.jsp?id=5`. The page has a header with the logo "Foodic", navigation links (Dashboard, View Recipe, View Blog, About Us, Logout), and a user profile "Saniya Jain". The main content area lists two steps: step 9, "Spread with tomato sauce and sprinkle with toppings: Spoon on the tomato sauce, sprinkle with cheese, and place your desired toppings on the pizza. Be careful not to overload the pizza with too many toppings, or your pizza will be soggy." and step 10, "Slide pizza into the oven: Sprinkle some cornmeal on the baking stone in the oven (watch your hands, the oven is hot!). Gently shake the peel to see if the dough will easily slide, if not, gently lift up the edges of the pizza and add a bit more cornmeal. Slide the pizza off of the peel and onto the baking stone in the oven." Below the steps is a yellow box titled "Precaution" containing the text: "I'm forever in favor of super-crispy, thin-crust pizza, but there is a limit to just how thin that dough can go. Stretch it too thin and the crust simply won't be strong enough to support the sauce, cheese, and toppings." An "Activate Windows" watermark is visible in the bottom right corner.

9. Spread with tomato sauce and sprinkle with toppings:
Spoon on the tomato sauce, sprinkle with cheese, and place your desired toppings on the pizza. Be careful not to overload the pizza with too many toppings, or your pizza will be soggy.

10. Slide pizza into the oven:
Sprinkle some cornmeal on the baking stone in the oven (watch your hands, the oven is hot!). Gently shake the peel to see if the dough will easily slide, if not, gently lift up the edges of the pizza and add a bit more cornmeal.
Slide the pizza off of the peel and onto the baking stone in the oven.

Precaution

I'm forever in favor of super-crispy, thin-crust pizza, but there is a limit to just how thin that dough can go. Stretch it too thin and the crust simply won't be strong enough to support the sauce, cheese, and toppings.
